ALFRED NIELSEN IS SLIGHTLY WOUNDED

FORMER COMPANY M BOY RECEIVES WOUND IN ARM ON HIS TENTH DAY IN THE FRONT LINE TRENCHES.

CARE IS EXCELLENT

Is Well Pleased With Care Received in Hospital—Member of Aviation Corps Writes from England.

Formerly with Company M, but now with Company A of the 28th Infantry of the Regular army. Private Alfred Nielsen writes from a base hospital in France telling of the excellent care which he has received: He was shot in one of his arms on his tenth day in the trenches.

William H. Lerch, another Rock County boy writes a letter from England where he is now securing training in aviation. The two letters follow:

France, June 17, 1918.

I am getting along fine and my arm is not as sore as it has been. I have had the best of care and that is how I get along so good. They sure have good help to the soldiers that have got some good hospitals here.

The Ministry of Sorrow

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE

DELAVAN

TEXT—Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glory in me.

We have been greatly impressed lately with the value of trouble as a means of opening men's spiritual understanding. Talking with a bank president some time ago, he informed me that he had been ill for several months and that the illness had left him almost totally blind. "I can see that someone is sitting in your chair," he said, "but if it were not for your voice, I should not have the slightest idea who you were." A little later he wrote me, "You left me a poem entitled 'What Does It Mean?' which has been read to me time and again until I have absorbed the spirit of it, if not all the words, and to one who has been so extremely active as myself, and finally has had 'The hindering wall placed before his meet,' the sentiment expressed in the poem has been most helpful, and but to thank you for leaving it with me."

In a recent letter he says, "For more than a year I have been totally blind. I am not praying so much for restoration of sight, which can never come because of the withering of the optic nerve, but I am always praying with Paul for grace and strength, which I am thankful to say has been given me, and for that sight which Elshia wanted his servant to have, that he might see the hosts the Lord had arrayed on his side for his defense and salvation."

Here is a strong, active business man, so blind that he has to be led about the streets, but whose spiritual eyes have been so opened that he sees far more in this world than he ever saw before.

And what has caused this change? Trouble. Nothing else, probably, could have arrested his attention so effectually and forced him to fix it on things spiritual so long and earnestly that now Jesus has become the sun and center of the universe, the solace and sustenance of his own soul. Truly his "light affliction, which is but for moment, is working out for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

These incidents show what a large and blessed ministry trouble has in opening our eyes to the deeper things of life. We see also why it is that God who entwines all things to work together for good to those who love him, mingles the bitter so plentifully with the sweet.

He knows that the natural heart is not inclined toward God, but away from him. We are so busy digging in the dirt for dollars that we will not look up at the Sun of Righteousness until he puts us on our back, where we can only look in one direction, and that upward.

And just as the stars are invisible by day, but shine out in all their beauty when night comes on, so God fills the Bible with special promises, bargain-day attractions to those in trouble—"For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion. (Literally, in a lofty bower, fragrant, sheltered and cozy.) In the secret of his tent shall he hide me; he shall set me upon a rock" (Ps. 27:5). So, too, in Ps. 46:1 it he says, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help (that is an immediate, right-away help) in trouble."

Psalm 107 tells the sad story of four different classes of people who wandered about by themselves until they were hopeless. "Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses." No wonder he exclaims again and again, "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!"

In these sad, sad times when trouble is more plentiful than ever before, what a comfort to realize that God is able to use every bit of it as a finger-board to point living and dying men to the cross of Christ. Let us keep the promises of God in sight in our homes, schools and places of business, and let us fill our correspondence and conversations with the words of Jesus. I wish some Christian printer would get up a window card containing in fine display God's challenge to people in trouble: "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me" (Ps. 50:15).

We must humble ourselves before God; we must recognize how incapable we are by ourselves of well-doing. How without the help of God all our actions would only be sinful.—Savonarola.

People talk of dying for Jesus. The way to do this is to die to sin; and if you love Christ enough you cannot help doing so.

A man has as much of a place in the kingdom of God as he allows the kingdom of God to have a place in him.

Wit and Money.

While money will take you a long way, it won't always bring you back. Wit will not only take you most anywhere, but also bring you back. Of the two it's the better. So get wit and wisdom!—Exchange.

LUFBERY'S PLUNGE ENDED IN BED OF FLOWERS

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]
Chicago, July 19.—The poetic end of the life of Raoul Lufbery, the famous American ace, was described in a letter from Aymer Flannigan to his father, Charles Flannigan, former police sergeant here.

Lufbery made a great fight, but finally jumped from the machine at an altitude of about 3,500 feet, he writes. "He landed in a garden of flowers, and a woman, who lived there, recognized him, and placed lighted candles about his body."

"The English-speaking German prisoners are placed in our sector. A German captain was astonished at the number of American soldiers. He said the people of Germany had told that only Americans are in France and that the troop ships of the Americans are all being sunk, and that New York has been taken and a German army is marching on Washington to take President Wilson prisoner."

"Say, we will have old Kaiser Bill in the zoo in Lincoln Park next year."

"We are eating well, get fresh meat and everything down to sweet cookies. We are even getting real American coffee and canned cream."

"How is that for our good old Uncle Sam?"

NEGRO DOES NOT LIKE INSTALLATION FURNITURE

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]
Chicago, Ill., July 19.—"Installation furniture, did you say? Jedge, Well, we listen to me. You hasn't got no use for installation furniture, no how. That's all I gets me here before you, Jedge, honest."

"It was this way. I bought me first table for Mandy on the installation plan. Then I bought a rug and a chair, and a piano, and lots of other things, till the first thing I know I didn't have enough money to pay for em all when the installation men come around."

"Well, I knows a lady with a little money, so I married her to get enough money to square things. But that didn't last long, that money. So I didn't have enough money to marry a fourth wife. I wants to marry a fourth wife, to get money enough to pay for a phonograph when I was arrested and brought here."

Thus John F. Brown, who is black despite his name, explained things recently in the Criminal court here, where he was brought on charges of bigamy. Brown was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

GERMAN ATROCITIES.

From the early days of the war, the German troops have perpetrated acts of brutal savagery. One charitable explanation, that they are committed after excesses with drink, does not justify the men who permit these excesses. No doubt there are plenty of Germans who are not cruel and brutal, but these acts are concealed from them. As a whole the Germans have waged war in the most inhumane manner.

The theory of the German rulers has been that other nations must be afraid of them. "Frightfulness" has been their motto, "count each terrible act against your nose, that never again will any one dare to raise his head against the German power, has been their avowed policy.

The long roll of German atrocities is too well verified to permit dispute. Children with hands cut off, soldiers castrated, unfeeling civilians lined up against a wall and shot to terrorize a city, these are facts beyond dispute.

The treatment of the women reported from France and Germany will attain the German name for centuries. The soldiers have been given full freedom to work their lust. It has been a common policy, when a city was captured, to reward the soldiers by permitting license with the women. Forcing prisoners to dig trenches under fire, has been an act of cruelty contrary to all laws of war.

If there is any justice in the world, these acts will be fully punished. If our world is founded on righteousness, if we want goodness and mercy rewarded, and cruelty punished, the Germans must get what is coming to them. A nation can not be allowed to act like wild beasts. It must be taught that the world can not be ruled by brute force. The only way to teach that lesson is by a smashing military defeat.

A TEST OF VERACITY.

"When the German admiral tells the Reichstag that the tonnage losses to ships available to the Allies over a given period exceeded 16,000,000 tons, and he then adds, tells the House of Commons that the losses for the same period were 11,000,000 tons, it is clear that both statements cannot be true," says the Wall Street Journal.

"Allowing for the various ways of reckoning ship tonnage, where Germany would choose the largest possible and the British admiral the net cargo space allowing for ships unengaged which may subsequently arrive, and for others sunk but not yet on record, the discrepancy at most would be a few hundred thousand tons. The difference of 4,000,000 tons or more, therefore, resolves itself into a question of veracity."

They are doing their share here at home to help save the food supply of the nation for our fighting units and the boys across the sea. Of course conservation is still being preached but with bumper crops being harvested and ripening in the fields there is a satisfaction in having done your own individual part.

The soil of Rock county is just as rich as ever. It grows just as big wheat crops as ever, the small grains are just as good and as for potatoes and other root crops the harvest gives promise of being exceptional. Now if the hens would only do their share and lay more eggs and the price of bacon would drop a trifle, life might be worth living.

Janesville is sending forth its share of young men and some that are not so young, at the call of the government to do their share and their places are being taken by the young boys and girls. A social revolution is taking place beneath our eyes, a miracle not believed possible a few years ago.

These band concerts are enjoyed, but if the band had a permanent band stand, and the public a place where they could sit and obey the music without the clangor of street cars and the honking of autos, they would attract larger audiences.

Those letters received from camps both here and abroad tell the transformation scenes that our soldier boys are undergoing day by day and when they come back they will be bigger, better and stronger men for their experience.

Many of our athletic girls can boast the boys at lawn tennis, but that of course was because the sun was in a fellow's eyes or he felt it unchristian to return swift balls.

The office boy does not feel that the work of the place can really begin until he has discussed the war and baseball news with the boss.

However, it would be a wise plan for some baseball umpires to invest 16 cents in a book of rules and read it at least once a year.

It still remains legal to keep places of business open through the ball games, but such unprogressive spirit is not likely to continue long.

The American idea of athletic exercise is still on the bleachers and yelling "Roger" at the umpire.

DECREASE IN STATE BANK RESOURCES NOT UNUSUAL

[Extract to the Gazette.]

Madison, Wis., July 16.—That the decrease in state bank resources of $3,670,752.85 during the past quarter is not unusual is the statement of A. E. Emerson, deputy state commissioners today. The bank statement issued for 185 state banks today show that the total bank resources on June 29, were $44,311,394.34 as compared with 185 resources on May 10, of $44,423,127.15.

In spite of this decrease the resources of state banks have increased $23,029,485.24 over one year ago. The statement shows that on June 20, 1915, the state bank resources were $322,512,905.09.

At this time of the year the farmers are spending money for the raising of their crops and have little to spare," said Deputy Commissioner Emerson today. "When the farmers begin to market their crops the resources of the state banks will show an increase."

The largest decrease for the past quarter is in individual deposits subject to check, which showed a decline over May 10 of $4,149,440.12. The next largest decrease was in demand certificates of deposit, which showed a decline for the quarter of $3,358,607.75.

But the German would consider himself fool if he had acted otherwise.

If the German could enter into other minds he would see that his activity must be fabricating its stories. But he is accustomed to hear the greatest statements in Germany made a solemn statement one day, advance another on the same subject at a later date utterly incomprehensible, and finally offer a new version proving that each previous statement was a lie. This is what Kultur calls "reversing of state."

There are no such reasons of state here or in England. Statements may be made which are figures and misleading and facts may be unwise suppressed. But on the mere question of veracity, we know the English standards and we know our own."

Reports from all parts of Rock county indicate that the "Garden of Eden" that induced the first settlers to come to the valley of the Rock to make their home is making good. Every crop is way ahead of expectation, grain exceptionally good, even corn is not backward and gives promise of a good crop with warm July and August suns, while tobacco and sugar beets never looked better or gave more promise.

As for the "war gardens" nothing extravagant can be said in praise of the youthful, the most mature, the carmen who please, gardeners who

RIPON ROLLER MILLS VIOLATE FOOD LAWS: IS ORDERED CLOSED

Madison, July 19.—The Ripon Roller Mills of Ripon, Wis., have been brought before the Enforcement Division of the Wisconsin Food Administration for Violation of Several Food Regulations.

Operating a feed mill as well as a flour mill, the miller obtained a license for a flour mill only, and has neglected to secure one for his feed mill. He has been receiving wheat from the farmers in exchange of the amount of flour he is allowed to grind for them; giving such farmers a certain amount of flour and a due bill for exchange, which is payable in the future in flour. As this is a violation of the Regulations, the Enforcement Division has caused the miller to be ordered closed until further notice.

The miller, Fred Cross, has also paid $50, which is to be paid to the Ripon Red Cross, his mill has also amount called for by these due bills and to make a report to the department of the closing of all these transsactions not later than August 1st.

He has also been ascertained that the miller has been getting an ex-

The Little Mother of Shock 3

By ZOE BECKLEY

OUT OF THE FLYING PAN— In the depths of utter panic Roger and Sally clung together, pulled in the driver's seat of the ambulance, two envys of mercy caught in a monstrous trap of destruction, they cowered with bent heads and nerves quivering under the descending blow.

Seconds passed and still the preliminary whistle did not change. Into the roar of the exploding shell it was Sally who first "came alive." She jerked herself upright, staring like a person emerging from a trance. Roger roused, too, instantly alert.

"It's that damned carburetor," he said through shut teeth, "not at all!" The bomb had stopped firing—perhaps it had landed on the ground, more attacking the engine. It purred, rose on a sharp crescendo, drooping out like the whistle of the carburetor, and finally pulsated lustily. Roger flung himself aboard and shot the car forward at his best speed.

With a few half mile between them and their blood-curdling adventure at the shell hole, he slowed down, drew a long breath and looked at Sally, who was grappling with a nerve strain that threatened hysteria.

"Nearest to heaven I ever expect to be!" jested Roger, nipping his forehead and the sweatband of his cap. He wanted to take Sally in his arms again and beg her forgiveness for having drawn her into danger, but took refuge in levity as much to keep her from serious reaction as to soothe his own ragged nerves. "Have one?" he added, holding out his cigarette case.

"I'd do it for me," she laughed shakily. "You haven't a cigarette or cream about you, I suppose? I've never had time to learn smoking."

"No, but by Jove, I've got this!" And Roger fished a package of gum from an obscure pocket.

So by the war-riven roadside Roger puffed and Sally chewed back to a semblance of calm. Each felt a

INDUSTRIAL HYGIENE—ACCIDENT INSURANCE

In recent years there has been introduced into industry a system of workmen's compensation insurance designed primarily to protect the injured workman against want while he is disabled by injury suffered in the course of his work. The system is failing to accomplish the stated purpose, because wrongly managed. The state enacts laws of a general character to cover the plan, and maintains a sort of super-visory organization working, but the state holds over the practical control of this insurance to private insurance companies and the trouble starts.

The private insurance company practically, if not openly, selects the physician or surgeon who shall treat the injured employee. It practices, if not openly, regulates his payment, it requires many attempts to extort from the attending physician all sorts of confidential information concerning the injured employee, as for instance, whether the injured employee has syphilis, tuberculosis, etc.—facts which are strictly none of the insurance company's business.

Answer—Temporary hardness (removable by boiling) may be removed by caustic lime. A few cents worth of lime will remove hardness which would decompose soap. This temporary hardness is due to lime carbonate which is precipitated by boiling or by caustic lime.

Answer—Permanent hardness (removable by lime sulphate and lime chloride). Caustic soda is best for permanent hardness. The amounts to use depend on the degree of hardness.

Answer—Corns and calluses are exposed to the shot of the enemy.

ROTEEN SPOTS.

A rather successful young lawyer was telling me about his feelings toward another young lawyer from his college, who is, if anything, a shade more successful than himself. "Do you know what he said?" when I see his name in the paper in connection with one of those big cases he is unable to get hold of, it makes me feel bad—unhappy, blue. I don't know what to call it. Now isn't that rotten? Why shouldn't I want him to have the work? I have all I want. Who shouldn't I want him to succeed too? It's a rotten spot in some place where that man is. Sometimes I make myself sick, I do."

I couldn't help laughing.

But I knew just how he felt and just how he hated to feel himself feeling that way.

For I've found rotten spots in myself sometimes, too.

You understand what I mean, of course—feelings, states of mind that you know are perfectly despicable, and yet you can't seem to feel having.

Some Rotten Spot Where? • Antagonisms Flourish.

Unreasonable antagonisms are one of my worst rotten spots. There are certain perfectly good people for whom I find that I have conceived antagonisms. Often these people are unusually nice people, as the its self-conscious and excited. Each felt spiritually closer to the other, borne forward on a tide so vast and swift as to obliterate the little landmarks of convention. In Sally's mind was a vague dread that Roger might venture out of his faint realm into sober personalities. Which was the better—the longer he had to do, but was deterred from a sense of iniquity between tenderness and bat-facedness?

Both were glad for the distraction of a nonchalant "Tommy" cigarette in hand, who came striding along the road. He stopped with a friendly grin that Roger could not ignore.

"I haven't any fresh tags, have you, old dear?" he greeted pleasantly. "I've just passed," he said, smiling kindly.

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am seven years old and I have been given to unknown soldier or sailor boys? I am a very nice young girl and my parents seem to take in great deal of him. He is likely to be called in the draft soon. Would you advise us to move before he goes or wait?

Are an engagement and a wedding ring both used? On which fingers are both worn? Would you also tell me what kind of rings are used for both?

Both of you are too young to marry. Wait until the war is over and he returns.

Both a wed ring and an engagement ring are used. Very often the engagement ring is dispensed with to save expense. The two rings are worn on the third finger of the left hand. The diamond is the conventional stone for an engagement ring and narrow bands engraved or augo blossoms or other attractive patterns are the favorite wedding rings.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl seventeen years old and I went to a picnic. The boy who was supposed to take me home got angry at me and didn't speak to me all the afternoon and evening. Now the first one is very angry because I went home with the other fellow. I like the first one better and I would like to make up with him. What can I do? Should I apologize? It really wasn't my fault at all.

HEARTH-BROKEN. If it was not your fault you should not apologize. Speak to him as you were good friends and he may be glad to forget his injured feelings.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Four weeks ago I received a letter from my friend in camp. He said that he expected to go across in a few days and that I would receive a post card from him telling of his safe arrival. I have not heard a word from him and am becoming worried. Do you think it is due to delay or that he has been lost at sea?

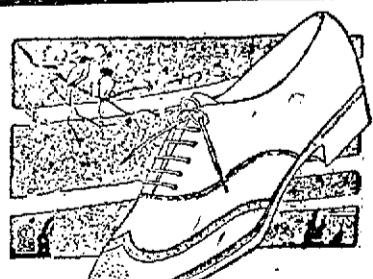

It is due to delay or else he neglected to have the card sent to you. If he had been lost at sea you would have had word of it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is it

I admit I am not crazy about bayonet fighting myself, as a general proposition, but I will say that there have been times when I was serving a gun behind the front lines when I wished for a rifle and a bayonet in my hands and a chance to fight man to man.

It was in this charge that our captain was put out of commission. As we were lined up, waiting to climb out of the fire step or the parapet, this chaplain came down the line speaking to each man as he went. He would not say much, but just a few words, and then make the sign of the cross. He was in a black cassock. He was just one man from me as we got the word and stood up on the fire step. He was not armed with us much as a pin, but he jumped up on the step and stuck his head over the parapet and got it square, landing right beside me. I thought he was killed, but when we got back we found he was only wounded. The men who saw it were over the parapet before the order was given and then the

Little Brother Run-Down

Cried and Fretted — How He Recovered.

Montgomery, N. Y.—"My little brother had typhoid fever, and it left him with no appetite, weak, run-down and always crying. Uncle Jim had a wonderful time in building him up and restoring his strength after everything else failed," Lucy Sherman.

The reason Uncle Jim was so successful in this little boy's case, is because it contains the very elements needed to build up a weakened, run-down system, make men, rest, blood and create strength. Smith Drug Co., Janesville; W. J. Smith, Brookfield, and druggists everywhere.

whole bunch after them, because they, too, thought he was killed and figured he never would know how they came out about their vows. All the men in the company were glad when they found he was only wounded.

White half of us were on the firing step throughout the day or night; the other half would be in the dugouts or sitting around in the bottom of the trench, playing little games, or mending clothes or sleeping or cooking or doing a thousand and one things. The men were always in good humor at such times and it seemed to me even more so when the enemy fire was heavy.

If a man was slightly wounded down would come the rifles to order arms, and some fellow was sure to shout, "Right this way. One franc!" It was a standing joke and they always did it. The point who did it most was a Swiss and he was always playing a joke on somebody or imitating some one of us or making faces.

We were all sorry when this Swiss "went west," as the Limeys say, and we tried to keep up his jokes and say the same things and so forth. But they did not go very well after he was dead. He got his in the same charge in which the chaplain was wounded. He was one of the bunch that charged before the order was given, when the chaplain got it, and was running pretty near me until we got to the Boche wire. I had to stop to get through, though most of it was cut up by artillery fire, but he must have jumped it for when I looked up he was twenty or thirty paces ahead of me. We got to the Germans about that time and I was pretty busy for a while. But soon I saw him again. He was pulling his bayonet out of a Boche when another made a stab at him and stuck him in the arm. Then the Boche made a swing at him with his rifle, but the Swiss dropped on one knee and dodged it. He kept defending himself with his rifle, but there was another German on him by this time and he could not get up. The corporal of our squad came up just about that time, but he was too late, because one of the Boches got to the Swiss with his bayonet. He did not have time to withdraw it before our corporal stuck him. The other German made a pass at the corporal, but he was too late. The corporal beat him to it and felled him with a terrific blow from his rifle butt. The Huns were pretty thick around there just as another fellow and myself came up. "A Boche swung his rifle at the corporal and when he dodged it the Boche almost got me. The swing took him off his feet and then the corporal did as pretty a bit of work as I ever saw. He jumped for the Boche, who had fallen, landed on his face with both feet and gave it to the next one with his bayonet all at the same time. He was the quickest man I ever saw.

There were a couple of well-known savages men in the next company and I saw one of them get under Fritz's guard with his foot and, believe me, there was some force in that kick. He must have driven the German's chin clear through the back of his neck.

We thought it was pretty tough luck to lose both the chaplain and the village wit in the same charge, along with half of our officers, and then have to give up the trench. Every man in the bunch was sore as a boil when we got back.

CHAPTER VII.

Stopping the Huns at Dixmude. I was standing in a communication trench that connected one of our front-line trenches with a crater caused by the explosion of a mine. All around me men of the third line were coming up, climbing around, digging, hammering, shifting planks, moving sandbags up and down, bringing up new timbers, reels of barbed wire, ladders, cases of ammunition, machine guns, trench mortars—all the things that make an army look like a general store on legs.

The noise of the guns was just deafening. Our own shells passed not far above our heads, so close were the enemy trenches, and the explosions were so near and so violent that when you rested your rifle butt on something solid, like a rock, you could feel it shake and hum every time a shell landed.

Our first line was just on the outskirts of the town, in trenches that had been won and lost by both sides many times. Our second line was in the streets and the third line was almost at the south end of the town.

The Huns were hard at it, shelling the battered remains of Dixmude, and to the right stretcher bearers were working in lines so close that they looked like two parades passing each other. But the bearers from the company near me had not returned from the emergency dressing station and the wounded were piling up, waiting for them.

A company of the 2nd Legion Extra-geral had just come up to take their stations in the crater, under the parapet of sandbags. A shell landed among them just before they entered the crater and sent almost a whole squad west, besides wounding several others.

Almost before they occupied the crater the wires were laid and reached back to us, and the order came for us to remain where we were until further orders.

Then we got the complete orders. We were to make no noise but were all to be ready in ten minutes. We put on goggles and respirators. In ten minutes the bombers were to leave the trenches. Three mines were to explode and then we were to take and hold a certain portion of the enemy trenches not far off. We were all ready to start up the ladders when they moved Nig's section over to ours and he sneaked up to me and whispered behind his hand, "Be a sport, Doc; make it fifty-fifty and gimme a chance."

I did not have any idea what he meant and he had to get back to his squad. Then the bombers came up to the ladders, masked and with loaded sacks on their left arms. "One minute now," said the officers, getting on their own ladders and drawing their revolvers—though most of the officers of the Legion charged with rifle and bayonet like their men.

Then—Boom! Slam! Bang!—and the mines went off.

"Allez!" and then the parapet was filled with bayonets and men scrambling and crawling and falling and getting up again. The smoke drifted back on us, and then our own machine guns began ahead of us.

Up toward the front the bombers were fishing in their bags and throwing, just like boys after a rat along the docks. The black smoke from the "Jack Johnsons" rolled over us and probably there was gas, too, but you could not tell.

The front lines had taken their trenches and gone on and you could see them, when you stood on a parapet, running about like hounds through the enemy communication trenches, bombing out dugouts, disarming prisoners—very scary-looking in their masks and keggs. The wounded were coming back slowly. Then we got busy with our work in the dugouts.

A sergeant was trying to drill a lot of raw recruits, and after working hard for three hours he thought they seemed to be getting into some sort of shape, so decided to test them.

"Right turn!" he cried. Then, before they had ceased to move, came another order, "Left turn!"

One hoodlum left the ranks and started off toward the barricade room.

"Here you are, sir," said an angry sergeant.

"Where are you going?"

"I've had enough," replied the recruit in a disgusted tone. "You don't know your own mind for two minutes runnin'!"

Two brothers once ran a store in a small western town where they had quite a large trade in wool on barter.

One of the brothers became converted at a revival and urged the other to follow in his footsteps.

"You ought to join, Jake," said the converted one. "You don't know how helpful and comforting it is to be a member of the church."

"I know, Bill," admitted Jake, "but I don't see how I can."

"Why not?" suggested the first.

"Well, it's jes' this way, Bill," declared Jake. "There has got to be somebody in the firm to weigh this 'west.'

The golden mean is to be maintained, however, between two rigid adherence to form and a pedantic and mechanical; that the imprudent soul can express itself in the phrase of the Paternoster, "Philistines Brooks poured out their great heart in the prayer of Chrysostom, and other 'forms' of the Prayer-book. Moved himself, he moved all who heard him."

"Jesus is our standing pattern in prayer. He enforced His precept with His example. Twenty-one instances of His praying are noted in the Gospels—secret, public, at meals, long prayers, ejaculatory, intercessory for friends and enemies; all are recorded. The fervor of His prayer is described in the Epistles to the Hebrews. His supplications were offered with 'strong cryings and tears.'

Fritz on one side would step out and yell "Kamerad," while, like as not, on the other side, his pal would put you with a revolver when you started to pick him up, thinking he was wounded.

Then we stood aside at the entrance to a dugout and some Boches came out in single file, shouting "Kamerad" for all they were worth. One of them had his mask and face blown off; yet he was trying to talk, with the tears rolling down over the raw flesh. He died five minutes later.

One night, while I was lying back in the trench trying not to think of anything and go to sleep the bombs began to get pretty thick around there, and when I could not stand it any longer I rushed out into the bay of the fire trench and right up against the parapet, where it was safer.

Hundreds of star shells were being sent up by both sides and the field and the trenches were as bright as day. All up and down the trenches our men were dodging about, keeping out of the way of the bombs that were being thrown in our faces. It did not seem as if there was any place where it was possible to get cover. Most of the time I was picking dirt out of my eyes that explosions had driven into them.

If you went into a dugout the men already in there would shout, "Don't stick in a bunch—spread out!" While you were in a dugout you kept expecting to be buried alive and when you were outside you thought the Boches were aiming at you direct—and there was no place at all where you felt safe.

But the fire bay looked better than the other places to me. I had not been there more than a few minutes when a big one dropped in and that bay was just one mess. Out of the 24 men in the bay only eight escaped.

When the stretcher bearers got there they did not have much to do in the way of rescue—it was more palbearer's work.

A stretcher bearer was picking up one of the boys, when a grenade landed alongside of him and you could not find a fragment of either of them. That made two that landed within twelve feet of me; yet I was not even scratched.

Dinner Stories

"Did you hear about the defacement of Mr. Brown's tombstone?" asked Mr. Black, a few days after the funeral of that eminent captain of industry.

"What was it?" inquired his neighbor curiously.

"Some one added the word 'friends' to the epitaph."

"What was the epitaph?"

"He did his best."

The force of the parable is in its contrasts. God's eye is never closed in slumber. God's self is love. His treasures are inexhaustible. He delights to give. There is no indifference or disinclination on the part of God which must be far overcomes in man's importance. The delay in answering a question is any, for the recipient's own highest advantage; that he may study anew his supposed needs, may analyze his motives, may review the promises, so that when at length the answer comes, he may be in a state of mind and heart to avail himself of the blessing to the utmost.

Postponement, for the advantage of the receiver, not the sender.

The Paternoster is in Jesus' mind. Earthly fathers have judgment to discriminate between good and evil gifts for their children. They have natural affection enough to incline them to bestow only the good. If that be so—and who denies it?—how will not the Heavenly Father inflict in wisdom, power and love, upon all that inclines to give the life and light of the soul, giving Spirit to those who, out of the vocabulary of the Paternoster, and in the spirit of the parable, ask Him?

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

Form and fervency! Their juxtaposition here is no accident. It is designed to teach us that they are not identical; that the imprudent soul can express itself in the phrase of the Paternoster, "Philistines Brooks poured out their great heart in the prayer of Chrysostom, and other 'forms' of the Prayer-book. Moved himself, he moved all who heard him."

The golden mean is to be maintained, however, between two rigid adherence to form and a pedantic and mechanical.

Temporary prayer, however minute and practical, is of great value to each class of us, to assist the people, the public, the soldiers. He would hardly omit teaching them how to pray.

Jesus is our standing pattern in prayer. He enforced His precept with His example. Twenty-one instances of His praying are noted in the Gospels—secret, public, at meals, long prayers, ejaculatory, intercessory for friends and enemies; all are recorded.

The fervor of His prayer is described in the Epistles to the Hebrews. His supplications were offered with "strong cryings and tears."

BRITTON RANKS WITH LEADERS OF PRIZE RING

INTL INTERNATIONAL NEWS

New York, July 19.—Six present-day boxers, three of them champions, can be ranked among the craftiest pugilists in ring history.

Johnny Kilbane, king of the featherweights, is a boxer of this class. Benny Leonard has proven himself to be an exceptionally clever boxer, as well as a tenacious fighter, and Ted Lewis, middleweight champion, is another "phantom" in action.

Along with these three champions come the Gibbons brothers, Mike and Tommy, Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, who has fought many a whirlwind battle with his right-fisted Lewis, and who, if he had hit like Leonard, would have an almost flawless record over a period of fifteen years in the ring.

Britton has been a clever lad from his early days in the ring. He had natural ability as a boxer, and when he was younger he possessed quite a wallop. Britton, today, is a veritable ghost in squared circle. He is one of the hardest men in the game to hit and never fails to put up a good exhibition.

His cleverness and ring generalship were vividly demonstrated in Philadelphia recently when he met Benny Leonard in a six-round bout. Try as he might, Leonard could not connect with the elusive Britton in a vital spot—and Benny tried all he knew to knock Britton out.

Britton has won all these years, as a boxer, is as crafty and clever today, as he ever was, though perhaps not quite as fast. He deserves ranking with the world's cleverest boxers of the present day and compares favorably with some of the greatest boxers of the past.

The former organizer and one-time president of the Federal League has entered a four-weeks course of training at Lake Geneva, Ill., to prepare himself for service with the Y. M. C. A. in France where he will teach baseball to French soldiers in the trenches.

Powers ought to be a valuable man. He is a great leader and organizer. He showed that when he built up a baseball organization that made organized baseball extend the olive branch of peace, the white flag of truce and several other symbols of "we've got enough." Powers has had military experience. He was a gunner abroad the battleship Indiana during the Spanish-American war and took part in the taking of the Spanish fleet at Santiago harbor.

Francis Oulment, one-time national amateur and open golf champion, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the national army and has been assigned to the quartermaster's department in Boston. Oulment shows the same enthusiasm and desire to go somewhere in the navy that he did in golf. And the best part of it is that he hasn't a lot of small-minded folk to deal with—as he had in golf—the kind who made him a professional because somebody numbed a club after him, or something like that.

Wen Willis Southworth, recalled from the Birmingham club by Pittsburgh, is being hailed as a real phenom by the Pirate fans. Billy is a hashy player and started big league scribbles several years ago with his remarkable fielding while with the Indians. He's a fast bird on the bases, too.

Babe Ruth has issued a statement in which he says he didn't plan to join a shipbuilding company when he left the Red Sox recently. Babe says Manager Barrow abused him and fined him $500 and Babe decided he just wouldn't play ball for the horrid man. Now it is said that Owner Franez patched up the trouble. Anyhow Babe's back.

Joe Riggs, the Giants' clubhouse boy, of the Polo grounds, has enlisted in the naval reserve corps and expects to be called for duty soon. The lad is setting a good example for a lot of ball players.

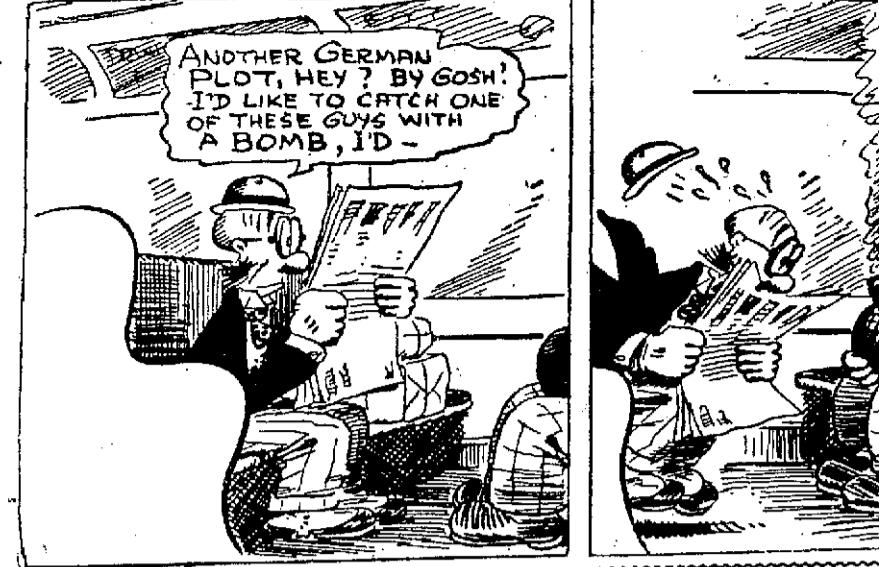

Willie Pipp has batting like a demon recently. The Sam slugger was sailing along at a 300 gait with the willow when he stepped into bat in the opening of a series with the Red Sox. In the next twelve games he collected four doubles and fourteen singles in forty-seven times up, average around .383.

Many fans have remarked that the first four battles in the big leagues were unique in that four of them were shutouts. But two of them were kind enough not to mention that the Cardinals made it an ordinary day by losing two games.

Russell Ford, former Yankee hurler, spitball artist and inventor of the emery ball, is pitching again, but not in professional baseball. He's a draughtsman in a shipyard and finds time enough to hurt for the yard team.

This chap, Hollocher, recruit Cub shortstop, must have the batters scared out. He went through a whole game recently without a single assist.

FELIX FIFTEEN HAD BETTER STICK TO GARDEN PLOTS!

Not a ball was knocked in his direction.

Billy Finchum, Pirates veteran, wants it known that reports that he has been released by the Pirates are greatly exaggerated, as Mark Twain would say. Bill's still with the club.

NATIONALS TROUPE ALL-STARS 5 TO 3

The Janeville Nationals downed the All-Stars in their "twilight" game at Bailey diamonds last night by a score of 5 to 3. The game made the tenth of the season for the All-Stars, who have lost only four games. The fielding of the All-Stars was poor and gave the Nationals most of the runs. Sunday the All-Stars will go to Beloit to play the Beloit colored team at Hillcrest.
